#StopAdani

One of the suggestions from the Canberra meeting that I attended was an "Out of Order" sticker campaign targeted at Westpac.

The idea would be that people would print an "out of order" sign and then stick it up next to a Westpac ATM. To be effective we need to be able to coordinate a lot of people to put up signs at a lot of ATMs.

People would register their interest and we would then email them to take action so that we can get lots of ATMs done overnight.

To make it more interesting, we would have a website that displays every ATM in Victoria. Once an ATM was "stickered" people would upload a photo and the ATM

OUT OF ORDER

Westpac refuses to rule out Adani. That's out of order! Take action now. #STOPADANI

See you tonight at the #StopAdani roadshow.

It is booked out with over 1,400 people going!

Franciscus Henri's cartoon didn't make it. Here's one I found on the net. A bit dated, but I like it ...

would change from red to green.

I spent some time mocking up a sample website using Google Maps, and it was surprisingly easy! There is a sample display below.

If you want to try it, visit www.diydoubleglaze.com.au/map6.html

My program is very basic, using static HTML. It needs to be updated to interface to a database. We just update the database to change the display. I would love to hear from anyone who would like to help with the web coding.. Hopefully they know more than I do!

Also, I am keen to hear from anyone who would like to join my work force of "ATM redecorators". Maybe it's your first opportunity to take Direct Action!

There are also likely to be a lot of background jobs. For instance, I need to locate the address, longitude and latitude of every ATM in Victoria. I spent about 20 minutes and documented 20 of them. Anyone who would be interested in assisting is welcome.

I am even contemplating a simple trial run for Westpac's 20th birthday which is on April 8th. This would run with the web page I have already made. People would email me photos and I would upload them to the web page.

So, if you are really concerned about Adani and want to do something that could grow into a major action, please get back to me.

Hazelwood finally closes

It is good to see that Hazelwood has finally closed. It will cause a short term price increase in power and I do feel sorry for the workers that have lost their jobs. However the increased price will drive investment in renewable which will hopefully bring prices down again

It will (hopefully) highlight the need for a structured nation wide program to close all the coal fired power stations.
