Princes Bridge

Three weeks ago, XR had their first major action. We occupied Princes Bridge for 3 hours in the afternoon of Sunday 8th.

The police turned out in force and 41 people (including me) were arrested.

We were not charged, but were told we would be charged on summons. Nothing has arrived yet.

It was a very noisy but peaceful event. We blocked the roadway and the police blocked pedestrian access

Araluen Solar Panels

Total Energy = 61.3 Mwh = $10,000 to the bridge. This was annoying as many more people wanted to join in.

Those wanting to be arrested sat at the front and police obliged. They had brought a tent to process everyone.

All very civilised.

Occupying Princes Bridge

PickMyProject Solar Panels

You may remember that 12 months ago I received (with your help) a government grant of $100,000 to install solar panels for not for profit groups in the Heidelberg area.

We have signed agreements for 3 sites for $20,000 worth of panels.

If you know of a group in the Banyule, Darebin or Nillumbik areas that may like to install panels, please get back to me.

Spring Rebellion

One week to go!

Plans for Carlton Gardens are nearing completion. We plan to move in Monday morning (7th) and stay until Sunday (13). Actions are planned for each day, with many more to be impromptu.

Melbourne City Council has said we can assemble at the gardens, but are not so happy about us staying a week or putting up tents. Police have said they will issue an official warning before making arrests, so you can join in and decide whether you will obey a police directive to move on. I will be staying.

Most events will be non disruptive, including The Last Supper for coal magnates, others will cause some disruption to city life.

If you want to be involved, register your interest here. Alternatively just turn up at Carlton Gardens and see what is happening.

Want to support XR Financially?

Running a rebellion is not cheap, but we do it all with volunteers.
